

From the intersection where lost meets loss emerges the unmistakable voice of City Mouse, the Los Angeles-based punk/alternative rock project led by Miski Dee. Known for their raw emotional honesty and unflinching vulnerability, City Mouse has become a vital presence in underground punk, connecting deeply with listeners through songs that explore grief, survival, healing, and hope.

Since their formation, City Mouse has built a reputation for powerful live performances and a relentless touring ethic to audiences across North America, the United Kingdom, and Europe. Each performance channels the same authenticity and emotional intensity that defines their recordings, earning the band a devoted and growing following.

Their sophomore full-length album, So Far Out (2024), represents a defining moment in the project's evolution. Evocative, melancholic, and ultimately empowering, the album navigates themes of loss, self-destruction, and resilience, while maintaining an undercurrent of hard-won hope.

Whether recorded or on stage, City Mouse delivers music that is deeply human, urgent, and resonant, with lyrics offering connection and catharsis for anyone finding their way through the dark toward something brighter.
